NASCAR

Few forms of motorsport capture pure Americana like NASCAR, which grew from gritty, home-grown stock-car racing into one of the nation's most energetic and beloved sports. Fans across generations are drawn to its roaring engines, close-pack battles, and the thrilling mix of speed, skill, and unpredictability that define every race weekend.

While superspeedways and classic ovals shaped NASCAR's identity, street circuits bring a fresh edge - tight corners, short straights, and precision driving that deliver the same unmistakable intensity in a more agile, technical form.

That spirit takes on new life at the NASCAR San Diego Weekend, where the Cup Series, Xfinity Series, and Craftsman Truck Series will race on Naval Base Coronado - the first NASCAR event ever held on an active military base. With the Pacific coastline and naval aviation landmarks as a backdrop, the purpose-built street course promises dramatic turns, tight passing zones, and the close-quarters racing fans crave.

This event blends heritage, innovation, and sheer adrenaline - an unforgettable way to experience NASCAR in a bold, completely new setting.

The 250th Anniversary of the United States of America and the US Navy offers a moment not just to celebrate the founding of a nation, but to reflect on the ideas that ignited it: independence, courage, and the determination to shape a new future. While this milestone is fundamentally American, its resonance reaches far beyond its shores – including right here, in Chichester.

Edes House, an elegant 17th-century house on West Street, holds a remarkable transatlantic connection. In 2018, archivists revealed an original ceremonial parchment copy of the United States Declaration of Independence within its collections, which was believed to be in the ownership of the 3rd Duke of Richmond, Charles Lennox. The discovery of this momentous document – one of only two known copies in the world – places Edes House, Chichester, and Goodwood at the heart of a strong history between Britain and America.
